President's Corner: Happy New Year 2021!

Dear friends and colleagues,

Greetings in this brand new year, which is already well on its way! I hope you also feel a renewed sense of freshness and hope in spite of the ongoing challenges surrounding us here in America and also on our planet.

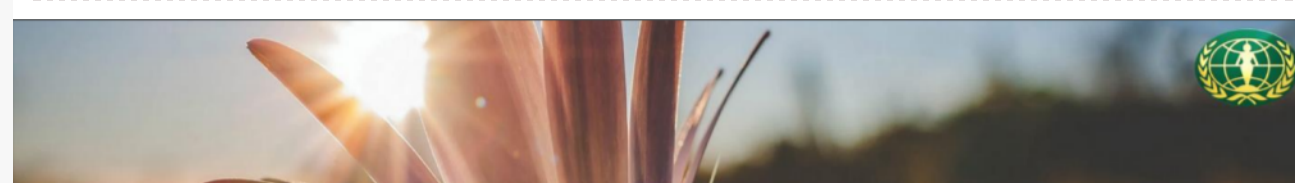

Please enjoy especially this first issue, where we listed and documented for you the many accomplishments and activities of our WFWP work last year! Following in our Founder's footsteps, nothing stopped us from spreading hope, goodness, encouragement, love, insights, and joy to those around us.

May this new year, which according to the Chinese zodiac is the year of the White Cow, representing motherhood and purity, be one where the feminine heart and touch of women and mothers will be able to overcome much darkness, confusion, and toxic emotions in the world!

Let us MAKE IT A GREAT YEAR!

Angelika :)

Challenges and opportunities in supporting foster children in Cambodia

This is the second article in a two-part report by Yuka Takahashi about her visit to Cambodia last November (read the first part here), where she was able to meet the foster children that members of WFWP in New Jersey have been actively supporting for the last five years. The Cambodia Foster Parent Project focuses on providing education to children in impoverished rural regions of the country, including Kratié and Takéo provinces.

About two weeks after visiting a school in Takéo Province, we met with foster children on an island in Kratié Province, in the northeast region of Cambodia, on November 21, 2020. In addition to stationery, toothbrushes and toothpaste, we prepared clothes and donated toys to present as gifts to the young students. Many children in Takéo (a southern province that borders Vietnam) are repeating the same grades as last year and a few have even dropped to lower grades, but children on the island have mostly moved up to the next grade smoothly...

An effective way to deal with anxiety: Mental housekeeping and other practical tips

However, every time I think of our beautiful grandchildren, my chest tightens, and I cannot help but wonder what kind of life they will have? Hopefully, they will grow up in a peaceful world.

Changes are happening ever more rapidly. How can anyone keep up? It is more important than ever to be rooted or anchored in something permanent, while life pushes us around...
